

Aine Steele is an actor, singer, and dancer from Cincinnati, Ohio. She is pursuing a BFA in Musical Theatre from Ball State University, graduating in May, 2026. Aine was raised in a performing arts family, immersed in school, community, and regional theatre productions and Irish dance, and is looking forward to stepping out into the professional world on her own in just a few short months.

Although Aine was known to be extremely shy as a child, she was able to find a home where she could express herself on the theatrical stage. She learned from a young age the power of theatre to connect people and build community and the value of each member of a production from those in lead roles to those in the ensemble and those backstage and in the pit. Aine spent a great deal of her life competing at the World level in Irish Dance and credits it with giving back her joy for performing and for creating an entire community all around the world.

Aine seeks to use theatre to explore the complexities of each character and make them human, while using the power of musical expression to bring depth and color to the audience's experience.
