

Ingrid Schjolberg is a singer, actor, and dancer from Minneapolis, Minnesota. She is currently pursuing a BFA in Musical Theatre at Ball State University and will be graduating in the spring of 2026. Ingrid is looking forward to venturing into her professional career in just a few short months!

Growing up solely entertained by MGM movie musicals, Ingrid developed a deep appreciation for classical musical theatre at a very young age. She has carried this passion with her throughout her education and into her career — and now aspires to take part in reinventing these timeless works. Through composition and lyricism written with intention and complexity, she believes that “Golden Age” musicals have the potential to be reimaged into new, unconventional adaptations that resonate with modern audiences in a way that has never been achieved before.

A couple of recent theatrical highlights include Georgie in Kinky Boots and Willie in Tennessee Williams’ This Property is Condemned. Additionally, Ingrid performed in Jason Robert Brown’s song cycle, Songs for a New World this past fall. Seeing the love and light in the faces of the audience each night inspires Ingrid to continue to tell difficult stories, and spread empathy and understanding to the world around her!
